API PACT PROGRAM

Asian Pacific Islander Partners & Advocates Countering Tobacco

Who We Are

The Asian Pacific Islander Partners and Advocates Countering Tobacco (API PACT) Project, a project of California Health Collaborative, is a tobacco prevention program based in the Central Valley. We serve the communities of Clovis and Livingston and the Asian American, Native Hawaiians, Pacific Islander (AANHPI) communities with intentional community engagement that centers voice, agency, wellness, culture, and healing as we build momentum towards ending California's tobacco epidemic.

Reduce Tobacco Use and Exposure

We want to help Livingston and Clovis find solutions to eliminate smoking and vaping in outdoor areas (like parks, sidewalks, outdoor events, and sports fields) and multi-unit housing communities (like condos, townhouses, and apartment complexes).

Your Voices Matter

Communities need to tell their stories and ideas about how to best keep families safe from the harms of tobacco. We can help keep our community healthy by working as partners with other AANHPI organizations and community members.

“Teens who vape are at risk for nicotine addiction, mood disorders, and learning problems.”

Youth Matter

Most people who become addicted to nicotine started using tobacco products before the age of 18. Let’s get youth engaged as champions for their communities! Are you between the ages 13 and 18 and reside in Clovis or Livingston?

Sign up to be a part of our youth coalitions today!
